Postcards from the edge of the Peninsula

By CHRIS COUNTS

"GO WEST, young man," urged Horace Greeley, the famous publisher and politician.

Greeley's advice no doubt inspired many a Midwestern farmer to toss aside his pitchfork and head for the golden pastures of California. But words weren't the only catalyst of westward migration in the United States.

The advent of the postcard in the late 19th century filled America's collective consciousness with images of the country's sun-drenched western edge, fueling the wanderlust of an untold number of future California residents.

Nearly 200 pages of vintage postcards are presented in a new book, "The Monterey Peninsula — A Postcard Journey," dramatically illustrating how persuasive images can be.

Not everything was better in the good old days. Here an early postcard depicts a ramshackle Carmel Mission Basilica after the Catholic church had abandoned it and the roof caved in.

For author and Berkeley resident Burl Willes, his postcard journey began in very much the same way as countless California migrants — by stumbling upon a single, fading card.

"About three years ago, I was staying in a little cottage in Pacific Grove when I saw a postcard of the Chinese settlement [at the turn of the 19th century]," recalled Willes, a retired travel agent and author of 12 travel books. "The postcard blew my mind. Here was a colored image from over 100 years ago. I couldn't believe what I was seeing, and I wanted to see more."

Willes' odyssey led him to Pat Hathaway, who possesses arguably the most extensive collection of Monterey Peninsula photographs in existence. Hathaway's archives feature more than 80,000 images, including about 5,000 postcards of local people, events and places.

Council: Keep walking tours out of neighborhoods

By MARY BROWNFIELD

GUIDED TOURS through Carmel will be allowed — but only during certain hours — if an ordinance OK'd by the city council Tuesday receives final approval next month.

Gale Wrausmann's Carmel Walks and similar walking tours are unregulated and currently operate without licenses. The council decided the town needed a law restricting them to keep the peace, and especially to protect residential neighborhoods.

"On Carmel's narrow streets and sidewalks, a large group standing to hear an oral presentation can result in blocked sidewalks, impeded access to nearby businesses or interference with traffic and parking," Roseth said in his staff report. "Such groups also have the potential to diminish the sense of peace, quiet and privacy of residents occupying homes on the tour route."

He suggested those impacts could be controlled without violating the businesses' right to free-speech by stipulating when and where the tours can go, and how large they can be.

In addition, tour leaders must "minimize interference with pedestrian and vehicular travel," and make room for others to pass, according to the draft ordinance.

Following a discussion of the proposed rule in April, planning staff asked Wrausmann and Carmel Heritage Society President Pam Klaumann for input.

Wrausmann asked for a 20-person limit, as opposed to the previously suggested 12, so she can continue to make her decade-old business profitable. She said her tours occur mostly in the commercial district but also include the Forest Theater,

Public support helps paramedic keep job

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PARAMEDIC DAVID Jedinak — who faced firing for allegedly harassing a coworker and making derogatory comments about his boss — will be put back to work, the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance personnel committee decided Wednesday.

A league of Jedinak's supporters testified at the second hearing on his potential termination, adding their positive comments to those made at the first meeting May 27.

The charges against Jedinak stemmed from a complaint filed by CRFA employee Uli Peretz.

"On Feb. 11, 2005, you became verbally abusive, aggressive and hostile toward one of your coworkers. In particular, you harassed and attempted to intimidate a coworker in regards to his duties at Carmel Valley Fire Protection District," reads the May 5 termination letter addressed to Jedinak and signed by personnel committee member Bill Parham that warned him he would be fired as of May 17 and could file an appeal. "In addition, you have made insulting and demeaning comments to and about ambulance services manager [and Carmel Valley Fire Chief] Sidney Reade."

"How have these frivolous complaints gotten to this

Mrs. Timmins remembered as 'vibrant sprit and a stoic Swede'

By MARY BROWNFIELD

MARJORIE TIMMINS, a Carmel resident for seven decades and the mother of former councilwoman Barbara Livingston, died at home last Thursday, weeks shy of her 99th birthday.

"She was gone. Just like that, she went from one world to the other," said her live-in caregiver of three years, Mike Biele. "We'd never seen anyone go like that. It's only in the old Hollywood movies where someone goes so peacefully, you don't even know they're gone."

Impressive even in her passing, Mrs. Timmins affected many lives — from family members and coworkers, to the children she cared for as a Cub Scout den mother and the people she met as a longtime volunteer.

"She never let anything negative influence her," her daughter said. "She overcame whatever adversities — she was a strong person and just loved life."

Born July 29, 1906, in San Francisco to Swedish immi-

For 50 years she volunteered at the Red Cross — canvassing Carmel to raise funds, working in the canteen at Natividad hospital, and organizing blood drives — until failing vision forced her to retire.

Tongues trilling and kilts hidden, Scots seeks advice from Carmel

By MARY BROWNFIELD

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS and business people hailing from Loch Lomond, Scotland, arrived in Carmel-by-the-Sea on a fact-finding mission May 25.

"They were looking for information to help them develop the tourist industry in Loch Lomond" and preserve the area at the same time, explained Monta Potter, executive director of the Carmel Chamber of Commerce, which helped organize the visit. "They were probably most interested in how Carmel has preserved the trees."

The group included developers, planners and officials with Scotland's new national park system.

Following a morning greeting by Mayor Sue McCloud — herself a Scot — and the bestowing of gifts upon her (including a well aged bottle of fine Scotch, which she promised not to nip into before noon), the group toured Sunset Center and then took a walk through town with principal planner Brian Roseth.

"They learned a lot — Brian Roseth does a great tour," Potter said. "I learned a lot, even, about the ordinances and the zoning, and what you could do where in which parts of town."

After hearing the city's planning objecgeneral manager Joe Donofrio, Rich Patterson of the Pebble Beach Company and Potter.

Prior to arriving in Carmel, they visited Lake Tahoe, Yosemite and Santana Row in San Jose.

"They were gathering ideas," Potter said. "If anything, it was probably a little like our trip to Sonoma [to check out tourism efforts]: There was bonding of government and private industry people, and an opportunity for all of them to be away from where they are and work on the vision for their area."

New center beckons visitors

THE NEW Carmel Chamber of Commerce visitor center opens to the public for the first time Friday, June 10, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The street-level center on the west side of San Carlos Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues makes it possible for tourists to avoid trudging upstairs to the nearby chamber office above the Hog's Breath.

A new 42-inch plasma screen features news about performances in town and advertisements for local businesses. Free brochures, magazines and maps are available, and the center sells postcards, calendars, posters and Carmel apparel.

Beth Culbertson and volunteers staff the center from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For more information, visit www.carmelcalifornia.org or call (831) 624-2522.

Developer trades water for right to build condos

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A SPLIT city council voted to allow the Carmel Inn for Seniors to become three condos — without three new apartments as required by the general plan — in exchange for a donation of 42 water credits to the city. Minus the 15 percent confiscated by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, that water could be used to supply three new apartments elsewhere in town.

Dr. Ron Chaplan made the offer to the city because he has been unable to sell the property for two years. He closed the senior residential care home a year ago because it was losing $40,000 per month, he said, due to fire code issues.

Escrow fell through four times, and interested buyers walked away after learning the property could not be turned into a bed & breakfast, a restaurant or another senior care home, due to zoning and fire laws, he said.

"I know you can't let my economic woes influence you, but that's the reality here," Chaplan said. "I'm at the end, and that's why we're doing what we're doing. We've tried to figure out a reasonable solution that would help everyone."

While the general plan stipulates that any existing building on a lot larger than 4,000 square feet can be converted to condos only if the remodel includes an equal number of apartments, demolishing the 10,780-square-foot, two-story building and splitting the property would make way for four condos on each lot, with no apartments required.

"While there are a lot of buildings in Carmel I would like to tear down, this one I think is worth saving," designer and prospective buyer John Mandurrago said. "It has a lot of Carmel character and fits in downtown."

Mandurrago said remodeling the property according to the general plan requirement is not feasible, because it would involve too many tenants with too many cars.

Proposal's evolution

When Chaplan's proposal was considered by the planning commission last month, principal planner Brian Roseth recommended denial unless three apartments were built on another parcel simultaneously.

"The property owner and the buyer were quite adamant that this requirement would not work," he said.

Ultimately, the commission recommended the council accept the water transfer but tie completion of the condo project to the presentation of a contract promising the apartments would be built by someone somewhere in the city.

Roseth outlined the 10 steps the process would follow:

Films in the Forest benefit set for young cancer survivor

By LAITH AGHA

FILMS IN the Forest director Holly Stock had only one slot left — July 5 — for this summer's open-air movie offerings. And when she was approached with the idea of turning it into a fundraiser for an 8-year-old cancer survivor from Pacific Grove, it didn't take her long to say yes.

Now the schedule features "The Dust Factory," produced by local children's filmmaker Erika Lockridge and distributed by MGM Studios, for July 5 at the Forest Theater in Carmel in an effort to raise money for Bailey Pitruzzello. Lockridge is also the sponsor for the evening.

About two months ago, Bailey was induced into coma by doctors who performed reconstructive surgery on his cancer-maligned face. Bailey was released from the Stanford University Medical Center in May.

Previously, Bailey underwent three surgeries to remove facial tumors. Significant portions of his bone structure were removed, including his optic bone, left cheek bone, all permanent teeth on his left side, four front teeth and a bone under his nose. He suffered from chondrosarcoma, a form of cancer that affects bone cartilage. The condition usually occurs in the leg and rarely strikes children.

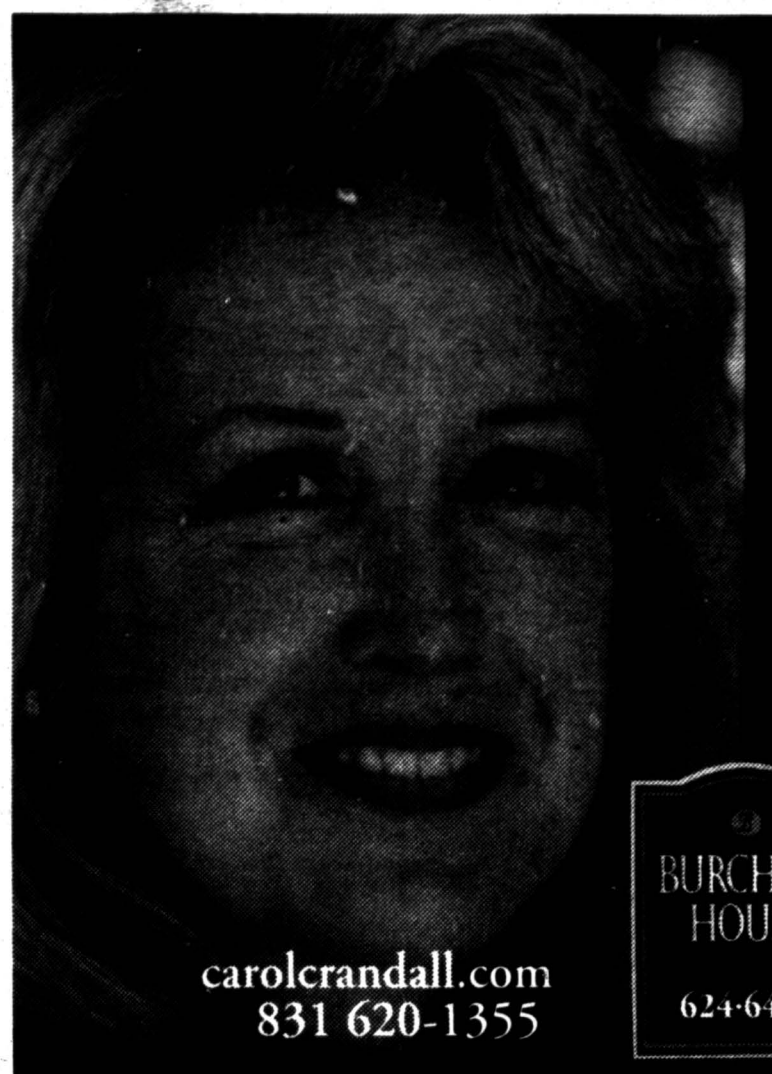

Since it was announced Bailey would be undergoing the latest surgery, donations have been generous, with $2,800 coming in recently.

However, given the circumstances — Bailey's mother, Nicole Erickson, is unable to work because she must dedicate all her time to caring for her ailing son and her other two children — the family is constantly in need of assistance.

Thus, the Film in the Forest was planned to further provide Erickson and her children with the resources to pay for basic provisions, such as food, and pay household bills.

Tickets for the movie are available at www.ticketguys.com, the Forest Theater on any film night and at SandCastles-by-the-Sea toy store in the Barnyard. Tickets are $20; $15 for children 12 and under.

To find out how to make a donation, call Delana Schneider at (831) 626-8361, drop by SandCastles or visit www.sandcastles-toys.com/bailey.htm

Drunken driver hits car while cops watch

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department, the Carmel Fire Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Office last week. This week's log was compiled by Mary Brownfield.

SUNDAY, MAY 29

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Located a male subject asleep in the yard of a Guadalupe Street residence. The subject was with a group that had rented the house next door for the weekend. There was no room in the house for him, so he decided to sleep outdoors. No other problems noted.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Responded to the Mission Street home of a resident who had found a dog loose near Dolores between 14th and 15th. The dog was transported to the police department and held until the owner was located. The owner, who was out of town, was advised, and the dog's caretaker picked up the dog.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Vehicle parked on San Carlos Street displaying expired registration was towed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ten citations for vehicle code violations were issued between 1215 hours and 1715 hours at several downtown intersections.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to a medical emergency on San Carlos. At scene, found an elderly female with back pain requesting transport to CHOMP. Firefighters assisted ambulance crew in loading patient into the ambulance.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to a medical emergency on Junipero, a female patient with back pain secondary to a fall.

Pebble Beach: A 35-year-old male reported someone was throwing tomatoes at vehicles on Holman Highway near the Sunset Drive over crossing. The suspects were cited and released. Case continues.

MEMORIAL DAY

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Intoxicated subject was cited for smoking in a Lincoln Street bar. The subject was released to her sober roommate, who took her home via a taxi. Information forwarded to Alcoholic Beverage Control.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A 33-year-old female was reported by her boyfriend to be DUI and have a suspended license. Officers observed her driving and watched as she attempted to park her vehicle on Monte Verde Street. Officers observed her hit a parked car before stopping. A records check showed a suspended license for a prior DUI. Field sobriety tests were conducted, and she was arrested.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male stated he was patronizing a Sixth Avenue store when he met a subject he knew. The two exchanged words, which escalated. The male claimed the subject made a disparaging comment about his noninvolvement in the military. This upset the male, who countered with his own comments. He was counseled on the matter. Information only.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Non-injury traffic collision on San Carlos Street

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female called, indicating she lost her wallet in the business district. A description was obtained.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: While patrolling on the beach on the ATV, officer was contacted by a female who said she had found a wallet on the beach. She turned it over to the officer, who took it back to the station and found it contained a membership card for the zoo. Officer obtained a phone number for the owner by calling the zoo. BIG BROTHER MAY SOON WATCH YOUR CAR FROM SPACE

By MARY BROWNFIELD

USING GLOBAL positioning satellite technology to monitor parked cars, and forcing people to move their vehicles at least 150 feet when their 90 minutes are up could create more parking turnover downtown, the Carmel traffic commission decided June 1.

Parking police could abandon their chalk in favor of "mobile license plate recognition" units, which photograph each vehicle, record its tire placement, and sound an alarm when the car is in the same location after the time limit has expired, according to police chief George Rawson.

This system would foil parkers who use the old run-outside-and-check-the-chalk-on-the-tires technique. With GPS, officers know whether a car has been moved, but the owner has no way of telling if the car has been checked.

"The people who are disrespecting the 90-minute rule would then be subjected to more effective enforcement," Rawson said.

He suggested inviting the Canadian manufacturer, AutoVu, to demonstrate its AutoFind technology, estimated to cost $60,000-$70,000 per unit.

The City of Monterey purchased the system and it paid for itself in increased parking tickets, according to Rawson.

Monterey's law says a car parked past the limit must be moved at least 150 feet before it can be parked again, Rawson said, but he was unsure how that can be enforced.

What parking problem?

Although a lack of parking has long been blamed for keeping visitors away from downtown, some traffic commissioners wondered about that.

"Do we even have a parking problem?" commissioner Bob Spencer asked.

"We need to make sure we have a real problem that we're fixing here," said commissioner Warren Neidenberg.

Commissioner Carl Roetter suggested chairman Tom Conmy send a letter to the city council "asking if we have a problem," and whether the commission should look into it.

But commissioner Robert Clifford, who recommended the 150-foot rule, said the city seems to believe there is, and Conmy said he sees nothing wrong with brainstorming solutions.

One already tried and discarded was providing unlimited parking on the edges of the commercial district to open up precious spots in the center of town for shoppers. That experiment ended after customers abandoned businesses near the all-day parking zones because they couldn't find a place to park.

Neidenberg believes downtown business owners are fine with the status quo.

"They don't care if their employees park downtown and shuffle their cars" all day, he said.

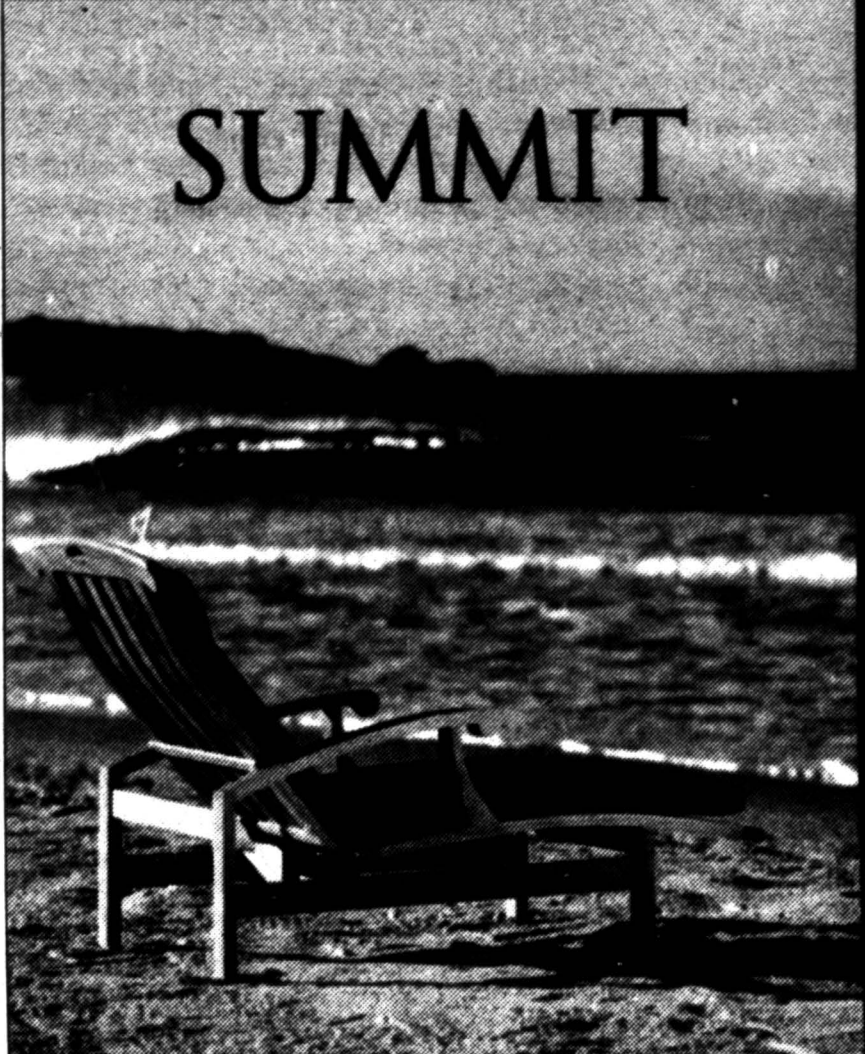

"But we have to find ways to make them move," Conmy countered. "GPS is one; parking meters are another. Or we could have a police officer on every corner."

Employees should be required to have stickers on their vehicles that prohibit them from parking downtown, according to Neidenberg.

"Making [employees] move even 300-400 feet isn't going to solve the problem," he said. "They're still going to be in town. The same guys will still be occupying the spaces."

Conmy suggested appointing Roetter and Spencer — who opposes GPS and the 150-foot rule — to a subcommittee to find out why Monterey likes the AutoFind system and why Santa Cruz apparently ditched it. The committee would also learn from the manufacturer whether it would work in Carmel. In addition, more research will be done on the 150-foot rule.

The commission agreed, voting 5-0 to form the subcommittee.

STAFF FINE TUNES MUSIC-AND-BOOZE LAW

By MARY BROWNFIELD

UNLIKE THE first meeting last month, no catcalls echoed through chambers at Carmel City Hall Wednesday during the planning commission's second hearing on a proposed ordinance to legalize live music in restaurants that sell alcoholic beverages. But critics of the change still insisted it would erode the city's quiet character. And they said the ordinance requires an environmental impact report.

According to the draft revised by planner Elizabeth Caraker following the first hearing May 11, an alcohol-serving establishment downtown could host live music if the owner:

- submits a noise management plan that identifies all "noise-sensitive uses" such as residences and libraries within 200 feet, establishes methods of controlling entertainers' and patrons' noise, and outlines how to comply with a 55-decibel sound limit outside the building;

- prepares an "acoustical evaluation" to determine noise levels, and

- limits live performances to 5 to 10 p.m. on weekdays, and noon to 10 p.m. on weekends.

The planning commission would consider the applications, review the use permits when they come up for renewal and hold revocation hearings if permit holders broke the rules.

Last month, commissioners asked for more muscle in dealing quickly with people who violate their use permits and suggested an enforcement officer monitor venues downtown. They recommended three dark nights a week to provide some quiet.

To appease those who feared the original version would allow lap dances and lunchtime lingerie shows, the phrase "live entertainment" was changed to "live music." Finally, the law would terminate after three years.

Carmel Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Monta Potter said 95 percent of the businesses responding to a survey think it is a great idea.

"Many of those business owners are also residents," she added.

Restaurant workers and other residents asked the planning commission to endorse the new ordinance.

Maria Murray, president of the chamber board who lives above Buon Giorno bakery, urged the commission to do whatever it has to do to get legalize live music downtown.

But resident Shirley Humann said allowing live music would be "another chip in Carmel's character," and Melanie Billig wondered if the change would be good for the city, or if it would only make it more like other cities.

She suggested better landscaping and cleaner streets would do a better job of attracting tourists.

"Have better trash pickup so it doesn't look like a dump all the time," she said. "If this is supposed to be a world-class city, let's start looking like one."

Some residents called for an environmental impact report on the ordinance.

Although Caraker said annual review of the use permits could overload planning staff and the commission, members decided that condition should remain. They also said any violation should trigger a review and asked that a fee structure be included to pay for the enforcement officer.

All agreed they weren't sure how loud 55 decibels is, so they will attend a live music demonstration and consider the ordinance again at a special meeting set for June 16.

"We should ask a musician to sit in a restaurant and play," commissioner Robin Wilson said, "and see how loud it is. It might, if nothing else, set some hearts at ease."

"We want to make sure this is restrictive and that what we're talking about is a minor change, not a major change in what takes place in Carmel," said commissioner Ken Talmage, who lives on Ocean Avenue near Harrison Memorial Library.

"It's with a great deal of thought that we're sitting up here trying to reach a very well written understanding of what we think would be acceptable to the community of Carmel," chairman Bill Strid said.

Additional stop signs could appear in phases

CARMEL POLICE Chief George Rawson asked the city council Tuesday to consider installing some of the 22 stop signs recommended for downtown in phases, rather than all at once, because, "some of the intersections generate a lot more driver confusion."

City administrator Rich Guillen also said haste might require the city to backtrack later.

"I guarantee we'll get calls, and six months from now, we might take some of the signs out," he said. "Hit most heavily the intersections that cause the most problems."

Nobody favored the idea of temporary stop signs.

The council agreed to consider phase one of the stop-sign additions at a future meeting. The recommendation to make most of the intersections in downtown Carmel four-way stops arose from a citywide traffic survey conducted by an engineer more than a year ago.

Wet spring could bring dangerous summer

By CHRIS COUNTS

SIDNEY READE knows how serious a fire risk Carmel Valley faces this summer, and not just because she is chief of the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District.

"There are weeds in the valley nine feet high," lamented Reade, a Carmel Valley resident.

Reade is charged with carrying out the district's weed

Weeds nine feet high are common in Carmel Valley this year and soon, they'll be tinder dry, raising the risk of a disastrous fire.

abatement program. She said heavy rains this spring have caused a surge in the growth of vegetation, posing an unusually high fire risk for homeowners.

"Back in November, the National Weather Service told us it was going to rain off and on until June," she recalled. "They were right on the money."

When it comes to fire safety, extra effort can be the difference between life and death, Reade said.

"The chance of survival in a wildland fire depends on the efforts made in advance by homeowners to protect their homes," she said.

Residents in the fire district are required by to provide adequate clearance around their homes. According to Reade, 100 feet of "managed landscape" and "fire safe" clearance is required around all structures. To reduce the risk of fire, homeowners should also take the following precautions:

- Clear debris from roofs;
 - Trim tree limbs so that they are at least 10 feet from chimneys and at least six feet off the ground;
 - Make sure there is a mesh screen at the opening of a chimney;
 - Clear vegetation within 10 feet of a propane tank;
 - Trim low hanging limbs to allow for access of fire fighting vehicles;
 - Make sure your address is posted so fire fighting personnel can find your residence if necessary;
 - Have an evacuation plan;
 - If you have a garden hose, make sure it has a nozzle on it; and
 - Make sure firewood is not stacked up directly against your house.
- According to Reade, the following are chief causes of wildland fires in the valley:
- BBQ coals and fire place ashes dumped in yards;
 - Discarded smoking materials;
 - Catalytic converters igniting grass and dry brush;
 - Children playing with matches; and

- Gardening equipment like lawn mowers, weed eaters igniting grass and dry brush.

Reade said if a homeowner fails to comply with the ordinance after receiving two warnings (each with a two-week grace period), "We can hire an outside contractor. I'm proud to say we've only had to do this a few times. We choose this process because it gives us results."

She said the vast majority of valley residents comply with the program.

"We really appreciate the efforts of property owners," Reade said. "We can't protect their homes without their help."

The weed abatement program will continue "throughout the summer and fall," Reade said.

Levine elected to chair United Nations group

By LAITH AGHA

MISSION FIELDS resident Larry Levine was elected in March to chair the United Nations Association's Council of Chapters and Divisions, putting him in charge of the largest grassroots foreign policy organization in the United States.

As the chair, Levine will oversee annual CCD meetings and the group's steering committee of 30 elected representatives from around the country. He will also sit on the executive committee of the UNA Board of Directors in the United States.

A Monterey Peninsula resident for 20 years, Levine has volunteered as the president and membership chair of the CCD's Monterey Bay chapter since 1998. During that time, membership has grown from 140 to more than 650, making it the second largest division in the country, behind only New York City.

According to the group, atop its list of accomplishments are two successful adopt-a-minefield campaigns — one each in Bosnia and Afghanistan — and the launching of the first UNA film festival. It conducts a variety of community events to inform the public on national security concerns, peacekeeping, weapons of mass destruction and world hunger.

While the position requires him to go to New York for meetings, "I don't know that I'll do a whole lot more traveling," said Levine. "But I sure have been emailing a lot more."

Around here, he operates a small import business, bringing in hand crafts and jewelry from Third World countries. He also acts as a consultant for nonprofit and local government agencies and chairs the flood control county service area for the lower Carmel River, and was president of the local United Way.

Mission Ranch showdown over where to breach

By CHRIS COUNTS

SCENIC ROAD residents worried their street may collapse into the sea during the next big storm will have a chance to square off against federal wildlife officials at a town hall meeting Tuesday at Mission Ranch.

The meeting is just the latest in more than a century of upriver events — from dambuilding to water diversions for agricultural and flood control purposes — that have shaped the landscape adjacent to where the Carmel River spills into the ocean.

According to a mounting pile of evidence gathered by Carmel Point residents, last December's northerly breach of the sandbar holding back the lagoon was a misguided effort by the National Marine Fisheries Service to tame and harness the waterway for the benefit of steelhead, resulting in erosion that threatened Scenic Road and a landmark cypress tree.

The stakes at the showdown June 14 at 1 p.m. are high, with both local residents and NMFS officials claiming to seek an elusive "win-win" situation. But there are only so many ways you can breach a sandbar.

In recent years, Monterey County Public Works has cut a channel in the southern section of the sandbar to help drain the lagoon and prevent flooding of nearby homes. This winter, the agency tried a different strategy and breached to the north to accommodate a request by NMFS, which was concerned that breaches to the south were draining the lagoon too quickly, sweeping young steelhead out to sea.

Because steelhead are federally-designated as a threatened species, a breach harming the fish could be a violation of the Endangered Species Act, leaving public works vulnerable to hefty fines. Critics of the strategy contend the northerly breach is the cause of eroding sandy banks that are threatening Scenic Road and a landmark cypress tree.

In an effort to save the road and tree, a group of neighbors formed the Carmel Point and Lagoon Preservation Association. The group has lobbied for the attention of the government agencies, hoping to spur them into action. The June 14 meeting is the evidence that agency officials are paying attention to the preservation group.

"The decision this year to breach to the north was a tragic mistake and it continues to put the health and safety of the public in jeopardy," explained Annette Thorn of the CPLPA.

"To do it again next year would be a travesty."

Therein lies perhaps the biggest question facing NMFS: Will the federal agency insist on breaching to the north next year, or will they consider allowing public works to breach to the south?

"The agencies seem committed to the northern breach strategy," Thorn said. "I think it's very important that they learn from this tragic error and breach next year to the south. It's time for the agencies to stop holding each other hostage."

NMFS spokesperson Jim Milbury said his agency is not committed to a northern strategy.

"Nothing is written in stone," maintained Milbury. "If anyone can come up with a solution within the bounds of the law, we are open to it."

Regardless where public works breaches the sandbar next year, Thorn worries that the construction of a seawall is on the agenda of the NMFS.

"A seawall makes no sense in light of the fact that there is no clear or convincing scientific evidence in this river system that a breach to the north or a breach to the south makes any difference hydrologically or biologically for the steelhead," she said. She also fears that a wall would cause erosion of Carmel River State Beach.

Milbury insisted that a seawall "is an option, but not one we're advocating."

Even if a seawall were to be constructed, it is doubtful that it could be erected soon enough to prevent the undermining of Scenic Road in the event of another wet winter, Thorn said.

"It will take years to get a seawall here," she predicted. "In the meantime, residents don't know whether they'll have a road or not."

According to Thorn, the sandy banks supporting the road have reached a steepness of 45 to 60 degrees.

The road is in eminent threat of failure," she insisted. "Thirty to 39 degrees is the slope that dry sand will support the road."

She said a sewer line located beneath the road is also at risk.

"If the road fails, we could have sewage on the beach," she said. "They're playing Russian roulette."

Ultimately, Thorn hopes NMFS will relent on its strict enforcement of the Endangered Species Act.

"My hope is that the agencies will come to their senses and enforce the ESA in the way it was originally intended instead of carrying it to the point of the absurd," she said. "The law was written in such a way that it should provide protection for people's homes. It was never intended to put people's welfare in jeopardy."

Pt. Lobos body identified as a suicide

By LAITH AGHA

THE WOMAN'S body discovered the morning of June 2 at the base of a cliff in Point Lobos State Reserve was identified as longtime Carmel resident Sharon Gandy, 52. Officials determined that she had committed suicide.

The search for Gandy began the previous evening when a park ranger found her car abandoned in one of the reserve's parking lots.

Gandy grew up in Cape Cod, where she graduated from Cape Cod Community College.

She studied theater and photography at Monterey Peninsula College after moving to Carmel 25 years ago.

In 1994, she founded the Harmonic Resonance Institute, a physical and spiritual health clinic that employs such techniques as sound therapy. Gandy directed the institute until 2002.

She was recently the sales manager for the Lewis Gallery in Carmel and was active in the Esalen Institute.

A memorial service is being planned for later this month. Donations in Ms. Gandy's memory can be made to the Gathering of the Way Church, 1246 Buena Vista, Pacific Grove.

Guardisman gets key to city

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CARMEL CITY building maintenance worker John Hanson, who spent more than a year in Iraq as a U.S. Army National Guardsman before returning home in March, was awarded a key to the city Tuesday.

A trained tank commander, Hanson spent much of his time patrolling rural southern Iraq in armored vehicles, but he also undertook charity work, distributing shipments of clothes, shoes and school supplies to students at a nearby school.

"John, in recognition of both your service to your country and your humanitarian efforts with the children of Iraq, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea officially welcomes you home and presents you with this key to the city," Mayor Sue McCloud said June 7.

When it was his turn, Hanson thanked the city and his friends for supporting his family, emotionally and financially, while he was overseas.

"I'm more apprehensive standing up here than chasing people in the desert in Iraq," he said, before presenting certificates of recognition from the National Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve to several city workers and officials. After he was called up, the city council voted to fill the gap between National Guard pay and his regular city pay.

The awards recognized each person as "a patriotic employer for contributing to national security and protecting liberty and freedom by supporting employee participation in American's National Guard and Reserve Force."

"When I went to Iraq, I didn't have to worry about my family," he said. "That was a huge relief."

point?" asked firefighter/EMT Tom Brown, the first of a dozen speakers at the hearing who praised Jedinak and said he should not be fired.

"Should the allegations of a disgruntled fellow worker be allowed to destroy the career of a man who has an outstanding record of serving our community?" questioned former Carmel City Councilwoman Barbara Livingston, who highlighted Jedinak's confidence and loyalty.

"What's happened here shows a very deep problem with CRFA," said Jedinak's attorney, Mary-Margaret O'Connell. "It should be resolved so that people can come to work without being afraid of speaking out."

She criticized the ambulance authority's handling of the charges against Jedinak, including the fact he received a paycheck dated May 27, the date of his termination hearing, while other employees were paid through the end of the month.

"Someone decided you would fire him, and that he should be cut off, and that check was cut," she told the committee. "That's very inappropriate. He's still on the payroll, because I complained."

She also alleged the internal affairs investigation was biased and that she and Jedinak were at a disadvantage in interviews and at the May 27 hearing, because they were unable to see Peretz' complaint letter until June 7.

"I didn't have the complaint filed by Uli Peretz that started all this," she said, adding that Peretz last week denied making some of the allegations, but his complaint letter proved he did.

Outspokenness lauded

"We find that some of our most outspoken employees are often speaking for many who are not as outspoken but are hoping someone will step up," said Carmel business owner Dorothy Cole. "Because of their courage and because they do speak out, we're able to grow and find out that we personally as owners have been making mistakes."

Medic Graham Evans lamented Jedinak's time off the job. He has been on paid administrative leave since February and was also kept out of the Carmel Fire Department while a parallel investigation was conducted by the city. Peretz and Jedinak also work part time there, and the incidents occurred there. Based on that investigation, police chief George Rawson put Jedinak back to work last week.

"The citizens of Carmel should know that when he shows up on the scene right now, he can't help you," except as a fire engineer, Evans said. They responded together to a medical emergency during Jedinak's first shift on the fire engine June 3, but Jedinak was limited to his engineer duties and could not assist Evans as a paramedic.

Others, including Carmel resident Clayton Anderson, spoke as direct beneficiaries of Jedinak's skills.

At the close of the public comment period, Parham told the crowd, "Nobody is questioning Dave's ability to perform as a paramedic in the field, and the manager of the ambulance company [Reade] isn't the subject of the inquiry here. It's the actions that were taken off the field and in the quarters that are what the discussion's about right now."

When the hearing reconvened, Carmel City Administrator Rich Guillen — the only other committee member there, as Bob Rice was absent — thanked speakers for comments and read the verdict:

"Although we strongly disapprove of workplace harassment and disrespectful conduct, we have decided to respect the recommendations [made by the public] to not terminate him."

Instead, a reprimand will be placed in his file and a conflict-resolution consultant hired to work with Jedinak and Reade.

After the hearing, O'Connell said Jedinak was pleased to have his job, but she took issue with the terms.

"They're putting him back to work, and that is a victory," she said. "I suggested having an outside facilitator, a team builder, come in and fix the morale problem, so they took part of that suggestion and are bringing in an outside facilitator to fix David. That's not fair; that's not right, and that will also chill his first amendment rights. And I worry about the other paramedics and firefighters who stood up for David and admitted they do the same thing."

Part of the House

When you buy or sell a home, what determines whether the chandelier in the front hall stays in the house or moves with the sellers to their new house? What is legally part of the house, and what is not?

If it is part of the house, it is generally a fixture. Thus, it is usually attached in some way, and removing it would leave an obvious absence from the home. Some sellers, remarkably, have unscrewed all light bulbs on moving day, leaving their buyers with a very dark home, indeed. Light bulbs, like the chandelier in the entryway, are fixtures. So is a fireplace screen that was custom-designed to fit an unusual fireplace.

But things get a little murkier when we consider pillows (not fixtures) that are designed to match curtains (fixtures). For this reason, it's very important to detail in a purchase contract exactly which items are to stay with the home and, for the sellers, which items they can take. You might be surprised to know how many transactions have almost exploded at the last minute because the sellers assumed they could take that chandelier (which, after all, has been in the family for three generations) to their new home and the buyers assumed they would take possession of the beautiful light fixture.

As has been said in another of these columns, "If it isn't in writing, it isn't." Make sure such items are handled in the contract and openly agreed to. For expert help call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureenmason.com.

TIMMINS

grants Gustav and Augusta Sahlberg, Mrs. Timmins suffered a burst appendix at age 6 and was hospitalized. Initially too weak to walk, she recovered on a farm in La Honda and later attended a one-room schoolhouse there before the family moved to Burlingame, where she graduated from Sequoia High School in 1924.

Marjorie Sahlberg married Frank Timmins, and they had two children, Barbara and Frank. In 1930, when Barbara was 2, Mr. Timmins was struck by polio.

Mrs. Timmins "became a Christian Scientist and adopted that power of positive thinking," Livingston said.

The family moved to Carmel in 1936 and lived on Lincoln Street in a home that is now Christopher's restaurant. In 1940, they built a house near the Forest Theater.

Half-century of service

Mrs. Timmins embarked on her 50-year volunteer career with the American Red Cross in 1942.

"Mrs. Vanderbilt Phelps, who owned a horse ranch at the current site of Los Laureles Lodge, would drive into Carmel in a used limousine and take us to a cottage on her property to make bandages for wounded soldiers," Mrs. Timmins wrote in her "Memories of the Red Cross."

She canvassed Carmel to raise funds, worked in the canteen at Natividad hospital, and organized blood drives until 1994, when failing vision forced her to retire.

The city council and then-Mayor Ken White honored her, and Livingston's partner, Bob Kohn, dedicated a bench outside the Carmel chapter house in her name.

Mrs. Timmins worked at Village Hardware and Neill Engineers to put her daughter through Stanford. Her coworkers would torment her with crazy pranks "just to hear her laugh," Livingston said.

"One time, she left work to find her tiny Renault parked across the sidewalk, wedged in between a tree and her office."

Soon after Mr. Timmins died in 1987, Livingston convinced her mother, whose eyesight was declining, to move out of the family home near the Forest Theater.

"The house next door came onto the market, and I ran over and told the owner, 'Don't show it,'" Livingston said.

'She would bark at me, and I'd bark back at her, and sometimes she'd just reach out and kiss my hand and smile. And she always had those bright blue eyes.'

— Mike Biele

They remodeled the house, and mother and daughter were neighbors for the next 16 years.

"She was always my greatest, staunchest friend and supporter," Livingston. "She couldn't do enough for me."

During her 12 years on the Carmel City Council, Livingston kept her mother up to date on politics. She would read her stories from The Pine Cone and always invited friends over to celebrate her birthday.

"And she always had her vodka tonic at night," Livingston said. "Sometimes two."

When her caregiver, Mike Biele, first met Timmins in 2002, he was warned that she might be difficult. But they got along famously.

"She would bark at me, and I'd bark back at her, and sometimes, she'd just reach out and kiss my hand and smile," he said. "And she always had those bright blue eyes."

"I loved her, and she loved me."

Livingston emulates her mother, sometimes by accident.

"I'll startle myself by actions and things I say, and I'll stop and think, 'Oh my God, that's just like my mother.' And of course, I look like her," she said. "I loved her energy, and her need to solve problems, always wanting to help people with any problems they had."

Mrs. Timmins — called "Tim Tim" by her family — leaves her brother, Earl Sahlberg of Belmont, his wife, Yvonne, and their children; daughter Barbara, and partner Bob Kohn; son Frank of Oakland; grandson Michael Brunn Livingston and his wife, Laurie Foster, and their children, Shayla, Ryan and Zoe, of Vermont; grandson Brian Fox Livingston, his wife, Elaine, and their daughters, Alix and Rory, also of Vermont, and a large extended family and many friends. She also leaves behind her beloved Corgi, Corky, whom she adopted from the animal shelter.

"Tim Tim will be remembered as a vital force in the lives of those who knew and loved her," Livingston wrote in her mother's obituary.

Memorials may be made to the Friends of Carmel Forest, P.O. Box 5067, Carmel, CA 93921, or to the SPCA, P.O. Box 3058, Monterey, CA 93942-3058. Family members plan a celebration of her life sometime in July.

PUDDIN' PORTER, 6, a wheaten terrier, was a shy dog when Dad Don and Mom Patti brought her home four years ago. Now, thanks to daily walks and romps on Carmel Beach — which is always awash with other dogs — her "personality blossomed," according to Dad.

She talks to other canines, but when she spies another wheaten terrier on the beach, she zeros in on it like a long-lost relative.

Her parents dubbed her "the perfect dog" for innumerable reasons: She's a terrific traveler, riding like royalty in the back seat of the family car when road trips are taken to Fresno, Sacramento and Los Gatos to visit the Porters' grandchildren; she scarcely ever barks, and since she has a single coat, she doesn't shed.

Although Puddin' weights 35 lbs., she still thinks she's a lap dog. The Porters have some charming photographs of Puddin' sitting on Mom's lap, almost engulfing her.

Puddin' is not a toy person, Dad says. She prefers to chew on knuckle bones from her holistic veterinarian. It's Dr. Bookbinder who's credited with having cured Puddin' of a bad case of itchy dermatitis when she was young. It seems, her breed notwithstanding, she was allergic to wheat, and being switched to a raw meat diet alleviated the problem.

Her back garden in the Carmel Highlands affords Puddin' lots of room in which to run around, as well as access to a new neighbor, a Doberman puppy.

At night she goes to dreamland in her sleeping crate in Dad and Mom's bedroom. When let out, guess where she heads?

WALKING

La Playa Hotel, Hansel and Gretel, the Hugh Comstock cottages on Torres Street.

Saying 20 would be too large, Klaumann pushed for a limit of nine to 12 people. The society leads tours only on Saturday mornings. They cover the business district and the Comstock cottages.

"We would like to see Saturday as a non-profit day only," she told the council.

"You have to make it available to both commercial and nonprofit tours," Wrausmann countered, and city attorney Don Freeman agreed.

"My tours are an asset that offer a lot to Carmel," she continued. "I have widespread support from residents and visitors, and I think it's wrong to discriminate against my business."

Walking tours good

Before delving into the details, Mayor Sue McCloud and the council agreed the city should allow walking tours.

"A lovely place like this ought to be available to anyone who wants to learn about it in this fashion," councilman Mike Cunningham said. "What we've come up with is an excellent ordinance making tours legitimate and making sure people who give them know how they have to behave."

"An enterprise like a tour, if conducted in a commercial manner, ought to be subjected to a business license," said councilman Gerard Rose. "It's time to acknowledge we have someone operating without a business license."

The council decided tours should be allowed between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Sunday.

Roseth had suggested no tours during lunchtime, but councilwoman Paula Hazdovac, who owns a downtown store with her sister, said that's not a busy time for businesses.

She advocated extending the time limit to 6 p.m., but McCloud worried about safety on Carmel's bumpy sidewalks after dark.

Members also decided to limit group size to 20 rather than reducing it to 12.

"I think we are not considering that there are huge numbers of people on the street," said McCloud, who argued for more limited hours and smaller tour groups during the busy summer afternoons when sidewalks are already crowded. "We want to draw our residents into town, and they don't like having to fight through crowds of people."

When councilman Erik Bethel said smaller tours might not be profitable, McCloud responded that someone else's ability to make money should not be a consideration.

"We should be concerned that every business in Carmel makes money," he countered.

Residential walks bad

Although Wrausmann's tours have included the Forest Theater and La Playa, the council decided visitors should make their way to those destinations on their own. McCloud said residents have complained about tour groups in their neighborhoods.

"Walking tours also have the potential to undermine long-standing principles of the city as expressed in the general plan regarding the need to keep commercial activities centralized . . . and protecting the peace, quiet and residential character of the single-family residential neighborhoods," McCloud read from the proposed resolution to adopt the ordinance.

"This is primarily a residential town," she concluded.

Members approved a map allowing group walking tours in the downtown area, bordered by Fourth Avenue to the north, Torres and Junipero streets to the east, and Eighth Avenue to the south, though it includes Sunset Center. The western edge jogs down from Dolores Street to Casanova, then back up to Monte Verde.

Special events, such as historic and garden tours held by nonprofits not more than four times a year, would face no size limitations or route restrictions.

Finally, council members decided the law should be reviewed one year after it takes

POSTCARDS

"The book would never have been possible without collectors like Pat," Willes said. "He was so generous with his materials. He is truly a living treasure of the Monterey Peninsula."

Hathaway was more than willing to help out with Willes' quest.

"Burl thought he would have to go around from collector to collector [to assemble images for the book]," Hathaway recalled. "When he saw that I had such a huge collection, it was sort of like he found a one-stop shopping center."

For about two years, Willes lived part-time in a Pacific Grove cottage, where he studied Hathaway's images and immersed himself in old issues of the Carmel Pine Cone to gain a better understanding of local history.

About 350 postcard images of Monterey, Pacific Grove, Pebble Beach, Carmel, Point Lobos, Carmel Highlands and Big Sur fill the pages of "A Postcard Journey."

According to Willes, many images presented an idyllic view of the Central California coast in an effort to attract new residents. He said some postcards actually depicted lots for sale, and prospective property owners gazed at postcards in very much the same way a home buyer of today might browse a real estate magazine or surf the database at www.realtor.com.

While many images portray a paradise lost, others actually present a paradise regained.

"If you look at postcards of Point Lobos, there was a lot of industry there," Willes explained, pointing out images of an abalone effect, or sooner if the tours appear to be causing problems. McCloud had argued for a sunset clause after one year.

The ordinance was approved 4-1, with McCloud dissenting. If adopted at its final reading next month, it would become effective 30 days later. Existing businesses, such as Wrausmann's, would then have 60 days to obtain their business licenses.

processing plant and a whale skeleton. "It looks more natural today than it did 80 years ago."

A 1907 view of Carmel Beach shows a large bath house planted on the sand and surrounded by bathers and their horses. And a photograph of Bixby Bridge provides a remarkable look at a stone building called the Rainbow Lodge Headquarters that once dangled on the edge of a cliff near the landmark bridge.

Other postcards show different perspectives on paradise. One of Willes' favorite images is a sheep grazing in a picturesque pasture that one day would become the 18th Fairway at Pebble Beach.

Roughly half the images in the book are not simply black and white photographs, but colorized or hand-painted postcards. The color postcards — highlighted by deep blue skies, lush green landscapes and vivid orange sunsets — were unlike any images the public had ever seen at the end of the 19th century.

"I like the black and white images, but they don't have the same nostalgic quality the color images have," Willes said.

While Willes has a deep affection for vintage postcards, he stops short of calling himself a collector.

"Whenever I travel, I buy antique postcards," he said. "But I end up sending them out to my friends. I love putting them out in circulation. And that's what I'm doing with this book."

Published by Gibbs Smith of Berkeley, "A Postcard Journey" sells for $29.95 and is available at bookstores throughout the Monterey Peninsula, and at Hathaway's store, California Views, 469 Pacific Street, Monterey.

Potential for greatness revealed at new night spot

FOR MORE than two decades Viva Monterey has been a fixture on Alvarado Street in downtown Monterey. A local nightclub that catered to a younger audience with live entertainment was, as a rule, an afterthought. At a sneak preview, featuring the Robert Nolan Trio, in the recently remodeled club, Monterey Live, owner Vince LaRocca unveiled what could become one of the Monterey Peninsula's finest live entertainment venues.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

The acts have been booked by Santa Cruz promoter Tom Miller — more than 25 at this writing — and what will be interesting to see is if Monterey and surrounding communities will support the eclectic lineup offered during the coming months.

On Wednesday, June 15, Monterey Live, a catchy new name for a cozy new room with an excellent new sound system will officially open with a concert featuring gypsy jazz guitarist Angelo Debarre. The music continues through the week with a flurry of national and international touring artists.

Other concerts scheduled for the new venue include San Francisco Bay area acoustic quintet the Waybacks on Thursday June 16; '60s San Francisco icons It's a Beautiful Day ("White Bird") on Friday, June 17; SolCaribe, the latest addition to the Santa Cruz world music scene playing dance music from Trinidad, Jamaica, Africa and Cuba on Saturday, June 18; singer/songwriter Paul Thorn on Sunday, June 19; I See Hawks in L.A. featuring Rick Shea on Tuesday, June 21; and on Thursday, June 23 Sister Morales, two sisters from San Antonio, Texas, who have been described as "a slice of So-Cal Country with elements of folkloric Mexican music, folk and traditional country."

For information and reservations to all concerts, call (831) 646-1415.

At the Jazz and Blues Company in the Eastwood Building at San Carlos and Fifth in downtown Carmel-by-the-Sea, saxophonist, flutist and composer Greg Abate performs on Saturday, June 11, accompanied by pianist Marshall Atwell, drummer Ron Marabutto and bassist Frank Pessatino.

Abate, considered to be one of the finest post bebop players around, played lead alto with the Ray Charles Orchestra and during the 1980s held the jazz tenor chair in the revived Artie Shaw Orchestra.

A jazz instructor at Rhode Island College, Abate also somehow finds time to tour close to 150 days out of the year and has released 11 albums. His latest release, "Horace is Here," is a tribute to the music of hard-bop legend Horace Silver.

The following Saturday, June 18, the

Greg Abate

KRML-owned venue presents the Brotherhood Quintet, a newly formed group that features the talents of locally bred musicians Ross Garren on piano and harmonica, Andrew McKay on guitar, Daniel McKay on bass, Robby Marshall on saxophone and Gavin Salmon on drums. Currently all students at USC's Thornton School of Music, the talented homegrown musicians have transformed their love of the blues into a contemporary jazz sound and will perform original compositions and arrangements at their Saturday performance.

Having entertained Monterey Peninsula blues fans for many years with the popular group The Blues Tones, bassist Daniel McKay was recognized in 2004 for his jazz talents by the National Fine Arts Association and performed with world-renowned cellist Yo-Yo Ma; and in both 2003 and 2004 pianist Garren received the ASCAP Foundation's Young Jazz Composer Award.

All Jazz and Blues Company concerts begin at 7:30 p.m. For reservations and more information, call (831) 624-6431.

TR Ritchie, a two-time finalist at the prestigious Kerrville Folk Festival's New Folk showcase, has become a mainstay on the national touring circuit and will perform at 7 p.m. Friday, June 10 at the Universalist Church of the Monterey Peninsula, 490 Aguajito Road, Carmel. Performing in a coffee house setting, Ritchie composes songs rich in roots influences — country, folk and ragtime — with a bit of Delta blues mixed in for good measure.

Pacific Grove songwriter Dancing Bear will open the concert. For information, call (831) 521-8864.

Other notable events include the Monterey Bay School of Piping concert 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday, June 16 at Stevenson School in Pebble Beach; the Third Thursday Open House at the Monterey Museum of Art from 5 to 7 p.m. June 16 featuring Dizzy Burnett and Grover Coe (831) 372-5477; and the Monterey Hot Jazz Society monthly party

1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, June 12 featuring The Fog City Stompers and Tom's Trad Jammers (831) 372-6803.

The piping concert will feature performances by world class bagpipers including Ann Gray from Western Canada's Celtic Band, Seanachie; Mark Saul of Australia's award-winning City of Victoria Police Pipe Band and a whole lot more. Call (831) 333-9423 and tell them MacVagnini sent you.

SINATRA TRIBUTE TO OPEN AT THE GOLDEN BOUGH

THE TIMELESS songs of "Ol' Blue Eyes" will soon be playing at the Golden Bough Theatre with the Central Coast premiere of the musical revue, "My Way: A Musical Tribute to Frank Sinatra," coming to the historic Carmel venue for a limited engagement.

Todd Olson and David Grapes' award-winning show opens with two discount previews at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, June 16 and 17.

Anne Marie Hunter directs the show, which will fill the Golden Bough with an array of memorable songs "Ol' Blue Eyes" crooned throughout his career. Two couples provide 57 tunes made famous by the master of pop and swing, and occasionally add a tad of light banter and dancing along the way.

The production features Equity actor Travis Poelle, nightclub entertainers Jim Andy and Lydia Lyons, and guest vocalist Stephanie Keller.

The revue formally opens at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, June 18, and continues at 7:30 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays through July 23 with Sunday matinees at 2 p.m., weekly through July 24.

Additional performances are scheduled for Thursdays, June 23 and 30 and July 14 and 21, at 7:30 p.m. All performances are in the Golden Bough Theatre, Monte Verde between Eighth and Ninth avenues, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

General admission single ticket prices range from $26 to $36, with discounts available for seniors over 65, students, children, teachers and active military.

The Pacific Repertory Theatre box office is located at the Golden Bough Playhouse. Business hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesdays through Sundays. For further information, call (831) 622-0100 or visit www.pacrep.org.

CET Spring Festival free and 'rousing'

CHILDREN'S EXPERIMENTAL Theatre concludes its 45th annual "Spring Play Festival" this Saturday and Sunday, June 11-12.

The festival presents a variety of entertaining productions for the entire family, performed by the classical theater conservatory students at CET.

This annual festival is free of charge — CET's gift to the community — although donations are accepted in support of this 45 year-old conservatory for children.

Performances of these original productions begin Saturday and Sunday late morning and run all day. Food and drink are offered by parent volunteers outside under the trees, a welcoming place to eat with the family between productions.

This year the festival will present a rousing series featuring the Greek mythological tale, "Baucus and Philemon," a bit of lunacy with "The Three Sillies," and a chilling tale of ghosts and greed with "The Ghosts of Thorensfield."

The casts of CET's Traveling Troupe will present their touring production of "The Elves and the Shoemaker," which they brought to Monterey County elementary schools this spring as a public service.

All performances are at the Indoor Forest Theater, Santa Rita and Mountain View, Carmel-by-the-Sea. Seating is limited in this intimate venue, so come early.

For directions, schedule or more information, call (831) 624-1531 or visit www.cetstaffplayers.org.

MARY KLOTZ BURTON, 83, of Carmel died April 20.

A native of Toledo, Ohio, and raised in Port Clinton, Ohio, she attended Tiffin University. During World War II, she worked at Camp Perry, Ohio. Mrs. Burton also flew as a hostess for TWA and worked briefly for the American Red Cross. She earned her private pilot's license in 1946, while expecting her son. Mrs. Burton moved to the Monterey Peninsula in 1950 and began working as the administrative assistant to the academic dean of the Naval Postgraduate School in 1957, retiring in 1982.

She had a lifelong love of the theater and, as a sophomore in high school, began acting in amateur theatricals and continued with a production of "Blythe Spirit" in Oklahoma, many productions at The First Theater of Monterey in the 1950s and the Monterey Peninsula College production of "Mornings at Seven" in 1969.

After living in Pacific Grove for several years, Mrs. Burton designed and built her home, "La Cumbre," in Carmel. She loved to garden, and her artistry was evident in the stonework she created from rocks gathered from the Carmel River.

In 2000 and 2004, she and her children made a nostalgic tour of Europe, visiting Frankfurt, Germany, where her children were born, and other towns where they had lived. She was very proud of the fact that she was a passenger onboard the fourth ship that brought military dependents to Germany after World War II. Mrs. Burton was an active member and former Grand Regent of the Catholic Daughters of America; a member of the Carmel Mission Basilica Altar Society and a founding member of Nuestra Señora Del Carmelo Chapter of the Order of Carmelite Discalced Secular.

Survivors include her children, Robert Bentley Burton, Jr., of New York City and Barbara Jo Burton Szemborski, of Virginia; her grandchildren, Robert, JohnPaul, Mary, Michael, Matthew Szemborski, Katharine Szemborski Edwards and Tage; eight great-grandchildren, three nieces, four nephews, and her half-sister, Sylvia Klotz. She was preceded in death by her brothers, William and Robert Klotz, and her sister, Agnes Klotz Waltz.

Contributions in her memory may be made to the Carmelite Monastery, 27601 Highway 1, Carmel, CA, 93923 or to the charity of the donor's choice.

JACQUELINE "JACKIE" Y. SCHECK, 76, a life-long local resident who was born at the H.L. Mack Ranch, now the site of Santa Catalina School, died April 23.

Mrs. Scheck graduated from Monterey High School and was a skilled seamstress who loved attending a sewing class every Wednesday with her girlfriends. Jackie is remembered as being very family oriented, and her favorite times were spent with her grandchildren and watching them at their baseball and softball games and rodeo events.

She is survived by her husband of 57 years, Floyd, of Monterey; daughters Tanya Tarantino of Seaside, and Tammi Tognetti of King City; grandchildren Ryan Houghton of Monterey, Stephanie Houghton and Samantha Tognetti of King City, Johnny, Jaime, Duggie and Tanya Tarantino, all of Seaside, and foster son Mike Scheck of Santa Cruz.

WILLIAM ELLIS RIPLEY, who earned a reputation as an expert on fisheries and worked on projects around the globe, died April 29 in Carmel. He was 87.

A native of Turlock, Mr. Ripley began his career as chief collector of fish for Steinhart Aquarium in San Francisco.

He went on to become a senior marine biologist with the Bureau of Marine Fisheries of the California Department of Fish and Game. He was named assistant chief in 1953 and chief in 1962.

During his time with the state, Mr. Ripley oversaw a project to preserve the soupfin shark and completed surveys on sea lions and the trawl-fishing industry. He and a colleague were credited with creating the midwater trawl net, which allowed fishermen to harvest fish from the midlevel of the ocean.

Mr. Ripley's other accomplishments included flying 100,000 California rainbow trout eggs to Brazil, where the fish were reared to stock streams. The goal was to create a trout population that would make Brazil a destination for fishermen. He also wrote six books, including "Rays and Sharks of California" and "The Soupfin Shark and the Fisheries."

In 1970, Mr. Ripley was appointed director and fisheries officer of the United Nations Development Program, where he oversaw 85 fishery projects around the world. He retired in 1982 but worked as a consultant to the United Nations until 1990. He moved to Carmel in 1978.

Mr. Ripley graduated from Turlock High School in 1936 and Modesto Junior College in 1938. He attended Stanford University, spending two semesters at Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove, and graduated from the University of Washington in 1940. He donated the building on South Center Street in Turlock that houses the Turlock Museum.

He is survived by his wife, Idamae of Carmel; children Diane Marquard of Carmel Valley and Randi Ripley of New York; sister June McVey of Turlock; four grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

ARDATH "ARDIO" MILDRED PERRY, 83, died May 6 at her Carmel home.

A native of Oakland, she was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II and graduated from Holy Names University in Oakland.

Mrs. Perry worked 18 years as a teacher in Oakland public schools. She was a member of the Carmel Mission Basilica and a 60-year member of S.O.T.S. She was very fond of thrift shopping and gardening.

Mrs. Perry is survived by her daughters, Susan Shryer of Danville, Barbara Smoak of Oakland, Margaret Gouzenne of Copperopolis and Patricia Perry of Carmel; 10 grandchildren, and three great-granddaughters.

She was preceded in death by her husband of 56 years, Frank, on Dec. 31, 2003.

Memorials are suggested to the donor's favorite charity.

THOMAS OLIVER STRATTON, 75, of Monterey, died May 22. A native of Los Angeles, he graduated from The Taft School in Watertown, Conn., in 1948, and from the University of California at Los Angeles in 1956 with a bachelor of science degree in business administration.

Mr. Stratton graduated from Boston University in 1960 with a master of business administration. During the years 1952 to 1955, he served with the U.S. Army in the Army Security Agency, including service in South Korea.

After working in Boston for New England Mutual Life as an investment officer, and Bankers Leasing Corporation as executive vice president, he joined Montgomery Ward & Co. in Chicago as treasurer. In 1967, he organized Monterey Capital, Inc. to sponsor and manage venture capital investments — particularly vineyard investments, commercial real estate and the ownership of capital assets.

In earlier years, he was a member of Indian Hill Country Club, Winnetka, Ill.; the University Club and Economic Club of Chicago; the World Trade Club of San Francisco, and the Beach and Tennis Club of Pebble Beach.

He is survived by Carol, his wife of 52 years; sons Brent of New Jersey, Jim of Campbell and Tom, Jr. of Monterey; five grandchildren, and his sister, Ethel Gould of Pasadena.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the American Diabetes Association or Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula.

The self-fulfilling 'bubble'

ONE CAN scarcely pick up a big-city newspaper or log on to the Internet these days without confronting alarming headlines about the supposedly inevitable "bursting" of the "real estate bubble" in many parts of the United States — especially in California.

Unfortunately, if this is a bubble and it does burst in the near future, the principle cause will be those very headlines which, all by themselves, are undermining confidence in the national real estate market.

The media conglomerates that control most of this country's newspapers, TV stations and movie studios love a disaster, of course, even if they have to make one up — which they invariably do if none happens to be occurring on its own.

Remember Y2K? The flu vaccine shortage that was going to bring an epidemic? How about the Population Time Bomb, the Coming Ice Age or the China Syndrome? Or perhaps you saw the movies, "Waterworld," "The Day After Tomorrow," or "The Matrix"?

The intelligentsia have long enjoyed predicting doom, regardless of the rosy circumstances in which they actually live. And the more they can attribute the inevitability of their preferred catastrophe to big business, technology or civilization in general, the better.

The Economist Julian L. Simon summed up this woeful tendency by foretelling that humanity's condition will improve in just about every material way while humans continue to sit around complaining about everything getting worse.

He's certainly right about the present crop of naysayers who look down their noses at the millions of Americans whose expectations of a comfortable retirement soar in direct proportion to their homes' increased values. Those homeowners are actually just foolish speculators who will soon get their comeuppance — that's the undercurrent in stories with headlines such as "Is Your House Overvalued?" (New York Times, May 28) and "In real estate fever, more signs of sickness" (Washington Post, April 16). A Google search for "real estate" and "bubble" produces 760,000 results, many of them with the same disdainful tone.

Ironically, numerous genuine disasters — such as the utter collapse in tech stocks, the Enron debacle or even the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11 — were hardly foreseen by the media. But real estate values are about to fall off a cliff, don't you know?

The logic behind this prediction is a bit hard to follow. Usually, the runup in home values is compared to the mindless escalation in Internet stocks six years ago. But the comparison has no merit whatsoever. At most, median home values in places such as Carmel and Atherton have increased 25 percent a year, whereas Internet stocks sometimes increased that much in a few hours — and for companies which never made a single dollar of profit. Quite a few stock shares that traded for $100 or more in 1999 were worth just a few cents two years later

Real estate, on the other hand, has a solid, intrinsic value which, barring a natural disaster of Biblical proportions, cannot be reduced to zero.

The amount buyers are willing to pay for mansions, tract houses, condos and second homes is highly susceptible to psychological factors, however. Thus, when they read in the newspapers that real estate values are about to collapse, people in the market for a new home are suddenly inclined to pay less. The news media's prediction fulfills itself.

Perhaps a sharp increase in mortgage rates is coming. Something like that certainly could produce a leveling or even a fall in home prices. But if a decline occurs absent any such obvious catalyst, you'll know whom to thank.

'Show me the water'

Dear Editor,

Was the advertisement, "About Pajaro Sunny Mesa," in your June 3 edition a promotional piece paid by a public agency? Did the Pajaro/Sunny Mesa Community Services District approve this bit of fluff, which failed to answer the question on the minds of many Peninsula residents: "Who is PSM and why do they want to supply water to our community?"

We need a serious exploration of PSM's "competing" desalination proposal. We have many promises from the PSM promoters but have received nothing tangible to date. Maybe PSM would be kind enough to answer a few simple questions:

1. PSM may be "The Water-User Owned Water Agency," but it remains a tiny outfit serving about 800 people. Why does it want to sell water to 100,000 people 20 miles outside of its jurisdiction? Does this public water agency have a profit motive?

2. What size desalination plant does PSM propose? Would it have water for new real estate development projects? Whose?

3. What is the largest project that PSM has undertaken? Does it have the financial capacity to support a $200 million desalination facility? Is it quietly "non-controversial" because it hasn't ever done anything?

4. Does PSM really have the skills and expertise to plan and implement a large desalination facility? It is admirable that Mr. Frenkel and Mr. Yeager were listed as PSM engineers, but they seem to be employees of Kennedy/Jenks instead. If that's the case, then let's just list all qualified engineers worldwide that have some desalination experience. Ditto the lawyers. This type of bait-and-switch tactic is intolerable in a community that has been openly and honestly struggling with a water supply problem for 30 years.

5. Although it is nice to know that PSM has "reasonable rate-setting policies," I suspect they are much the same as any other regulated water utility in this state. The illusion presented here is that other utilities, like Cal-Am, are unreasonable. The real question is, "How does PSM propose to adjust their rate schedule to accommodate a $200 million dollar project?"

(If they propose no adjustment, they have my vote.) The harsh reality is that $200 million dollars will have to be financed, publicly or privately, short term or long term. It won't be free, and it will reflect heavily on our water bills — twice what we are paying now.

6. PSM claims they are the right choice for a desalination plant to serve Monterey County. Since PSM is a good neighbor, they should be ready and willing to share with us their lineup of contracts for consultants and vendors. PSM, are you accountable?

We need a safe, secure and reliable drinking water for a large existing population. Which horse should we bet on? MPWMD, with their silly appeal to "purchase" Cal-Am? PSM, with their smoke-and-mirrors rhetoric? Or Cal-Am, who's doing the job anyway? Come on people, show me the water!

Marc Béique, Monterey

Heart bypass on the corner?

Dear Editor,

I read with some interest the "story" about Pajaro-Sunny Mesa Community Services District that ran in last Friday's (June 3) Carmel Pine Cone. What struck me was what the story didn't tell us.

The "story" neglected to mention that the Pajaro-Sunny Mesa CSD only serves about 800 water customers in North County. Moreover, nothing is said about how they are going to finance a project large enough to serve a population of 100,000 20 miles away. Nor was there anything in the story explaining how a small district can afford the services of the Kennedy/Jenks consulting firm and experienced attorneys.

While I believe public participation in a desalinization project can lower financing costs, a small water agency is not the answer. Our water may be expensive, but after 24 years of paying Cal-Am's water bills I have never questioned whether it would be safe and reliable. As Peninsula residents know only too well, we can not live without water. Would you go to the corner health clinic for heart bypass surgery? I think not. Then, why should we ask an 800-customer water district to bypass the Carmel River?

Stan Ferraro, Pebble Beach

'Engage the issue honestly'

Dear Editor,

I have been amused by the flurry of letters in The Pine Cone over the last month concerning the aborted debate on incorporation between Robert Sinotte and me at the May 2004 Los Tulares annual homeowners association meeting. I am pleased to see that the opposition is finally admitting that there was supposed to be a debate on incorporation and that Sinotte's failure to appear was due to faulty directions. Tom Branson's letter (June 3) and personal communication with Sinotte verify this fact. What is puzzling to me was Sinotte's earlier letter published in The Pine Cone vehemently denying any such event took place (or was supposed to take place). Why the denial when a perfectly understandable explanation for his failure to appear was at hand? Perhaps the change of story was made necessary under the weight of an auditorium full of residents who patiently waited for the announced debate to occur?

While I appreciate Branson's gracious letter, I have never in my life met or spoken with him. I was invited to debate by Samuel "Chip" Hale, the Los Tulares HOA President at the time. Perhaps Branson had a conversation with a leader of the Carmel Valley Forum, an organization that cannot take a pro or con position on incorporation.

In April 2004, the Board of the Carmel Valley Association voted unanimously to support the creation of a Town of Carmel Valley, assuming fiscal feasibility was shown (which it now has been). With that vote, the board called upon its members to play an active role in promoting incorporation as the best means available to preserve our rural character and open spaces from a Board of Supervisors that does not share our values. It is because CVA had recently become an advocate of incorporation that I was invited to debate Sinotte, a long time anti-incorporation activist.

Can we now please move on? I imagine most Pine Cone readers don't really care much about what happened at one meeting over a year ago. What they do care about, however, is to have a vibrant and ongoing debate on the most important matter to face our community in decades: to be or not to be a town. CVA has repeatedly called for such debates to be held, and the Forum has agreed to make the arrangements. The problem, of course, is that Sinotte and the opposition refuse to debate. Why? I suspect I know — in a debate, the opposition would have to answer for the series of outrageous claims they have made in order to scare people from considering incorporation. I wouldn't want to be held accountable for those whoppers either.

Our community has the right to make an informed choice on incorporation. We who support a Town of Carmel Valley are ready to do our part. It is high time the opposition stops shirking its responsibility to engage this issue openly and honestly.

Glenn E. Robinson, president, Carmel Valley Association

'Sleepy city'

Dear Editor,

Leon Russell, from his piano bench on stage Saturday night at Sunset Center, remarked about the excessive number of art galleries in Carmel. A week before in Beverly Hills, Lena Simovic, of the Luxe Rodeo Hotel on Rodeo Drive stated, "Carmel, I was just there, why so many art galleries and no live music? It's dead there when the sun goes down!"

I explained to Lena that the next time she visits, hopefully she can get into the members-only downtown club where invited guests can see Terry Shehorn and his Long Distance band. Whether or not live music will ever be available to the public in downtown Carmel, I believe we're all hearing that there are too many art galleries and not enough evening entertainment to keep this sleepy city alive until at least 11 p.m.

Sad thanks

Dear Editor,

I wanted to take a moment to thank the following businesses and many unnamed individuals who helped our family during a very difficult time. On Friday evening, May 20th our nephew, Stephan Nataf, was killed in a car accident in your community. Our family quickly left North Carolina and headed to California to face the most tragic event in our life. I pray that none of you have to experience this.

Thanks to the people of Carmel and the Monterey Bay area, you made this horrific visit, one of comfort, respect and honor. I can and would like to share how each of you helped us, but it would take too long. Each of you made this easier for us to handle. The Stevenson School, Carmel Mission Best Western, Seaview Inn, Long Drugs (Crossroads), Allegro's Restaurant, Pebble Beach Fire & Rescue, Spanish Bay Restaurant, California Towing, From Scratch Restaurant, Pebble Beach Golf Club, Quail Run Country Club, Stillwater Cove, Cypress Point Club and Wolf Camera.

I hope that one day, our family can return to walk your beaches, explore Big Sur, Monterey Bay and take in all the beauty of your wonderful community.

"Carmel Legends"

There are certain sacred cows in the history of Carmel who had long been praised for pioneering the artistic reputation of this extraordinary place. Oddly enough, we find it difficult to express much admiration or reverence for them, and we will probably be roundly criticized for lumping them all together as a pretty irresponsible. The ring leader was GEORGE STERLING, a dilettante of the early 1900's, a poet by his own definition, who guided this group of ne're-do-wells through a series of revelries which would get them jailed today. One of his many buddies was AMBROSE BIERCE, a San Francisco cynic who disappeared, in 1916 or so, in Mexico. Sterling himself committed suicide at the Bohemian Club in 1926. In fact, a number of the so-called Bohemians of Carmel met similarly self-induced ends. It's a puzzlement: they partied, they picnicked, they talked and sang and drank. And they wrote: poems, short stories, plays, novels. Not one of them - STERLING, MARY AUSTIN, JIMMY HOPPER, even SINCLAIR LEWIS was content to live an uninvolved life. They created, they invented, they revolted, they enjoyed the remarkable gift of nature which came to be called "Carmel-by-the-Sea." Disillusioned as most of them came to be, they are the fabric on which this remarkable place is woven. And we'll hear more about them in subsequent legends.

New bills tout double fines on C.V. road

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE LONG-RUNNING effort to put back the double-fine zone on Carmel Valley Road between Highway 1 through C.V. Village has found renewed support in the Legislature.

After two failed efforts last year, Assemblyman John Laird took up the issue again in February and shepherded his AB 1384 through several committees and the full Assembly, which voted 61-14 in its favor May 26. It is set to appear next before the Senate Transportation and Housing Committee.

"I obviously thought it was worthy last year and think it is still worthy, but the question is, can we construct it in a way that the majority of the State Senate and the Senate committees can see the worthiness?" Laird asked. "We're working hard on it."

Senator Abel Maldonado's SB 283 found equal success in committees and before the full Senate, which voted 23-13 to pass it June 1.

Each bill must now make it through the other side of the Legislature and be signed by Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger to become law.

"I hope we'll be able to help Mr. Laird on our side, and he can help us on his side," said Tom Kise, Maldonado's communications director. "And we can help people on Carmel Valley Road and on the roads of Monterey County by discouraging people from driving recklessly."

Laird's bill would reestablish the Carmel Valley Road double-fine zone that was implemented in 2001 by a bill carried by Assemblyman Simon Salinas that expired Jan. 1, 2004. It would also renew double fines on Highway 101 between Arcata and Eureka, on Highway 101 through Prunedale and on Highway 1/Mission Street in Santa Cruz.

Maldonado's bill would achieve the same goal on Carmel Valley Road, as well as along Highway 101 from Boronda Road to the San Benito-Monterey County line.

Motorists cited for unlawful passing, excessive speed, reckless driving, drunken driving, racing and other serious moving violations would face double fines for those crimes, according to the bills.

For example, the fine for breaking the speed limit by 10 mph is $96, which includes a base fine of $25, $66 in penalties and a $5 surcharge. A DFZ ticket doubles the base fine, raising the ticket to $121, according to California Highway Patrol Officer Richard Richards. While a reckless driver who causes injury would normally face a $1,119 citation, the base fee of $350 would double in a DFZ, for a total of $1,469.

The bills call for other safety improvements and public information campaigns about double fine zones, which would be in effect until 2010. Caltrans would analyze their effectiveness in reducing injury accidents and fatalities in a report due in 2008, according to Maldonado's bill, and in 2009, according to Laird's bill.

The state's first double-fine zone was implemented in 1995, and since that time, 14 roads — nine in Northern California, five in Southern California — have carried the designation. With the exception of Highway 101 through Humboldt County, all have since expired. The Humboldt-area zone is set to end Jan. 1, 2006.

Despite recent votes in favor of the bills, history suggests they face an uphill battle. A similar Assembly bill authored by Laird last year died in committee, after which he convinced Senator Tom Torlakson of Antioch to add Carmel Valley Road to his bill seeking double-fine zones elsewhere in the state. That bill failed to pass the same committee.

"They were concerned that there weren't overall standards for what would qualify as a double-fine zone, and there were a number of conversations about that," Laird said. "We believe there is a general understanding forming about what those standards would be."

Using rates of injury accidents and fatalities during the past three years, as well as a record of other safety improvements, certain roads would qualify, according to Laird.

"Carmel Valley Road and the Prunedale corridor would meet the standards," he said.

But double-fine-zone opponents, including the California State Automobile Association and the Teamsters Union that represents truck drivers, cite a 2003 Caltrans study that indicated overall accident rates slightly increased in double-fine zones, while serious accidents experienced only a "statistically insignificant" decline.

"The Teamsters are historically opposed to double-fine zones — that is their prerogative and their right," Kise said. "And we're going to do what we can to see the bill passed."

Proponents argue that special driving zones motivate most drivers to slow down.

According to the Monterey County Public Works Department, simple annual averages before and after the double-fine zone was implemented on Carmel Valley Road indicated declines in collisions, fatalities, injuries and property damage. Other safety improvements were also undertaken during that time.

The proposed laws have local support. Maldonado's bill was written at the request of Monterey County and is backed by the sheriff's office, county public works, the California Highway Patrol and a community traffic safety task force that "evaluated a range of engineering and enforcement alternatives to reduce speeding along these highways," according to Maldonado's office. "As a result of this collaboration, all three organizations concur with the Monterey County Board of Supervisors that the establishment of double-fine zones will improve public safety."

'The Teamsters are historically opposed to double-fine zones — that is their prerogative and their right.'

Old veterinary hospital could become condos

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE OWNER of a vacant veterinary hospital sought permission Wednesday to tear it down and build condos in its place, but the planning commission sent the architect back to the drawing board.

Owner Gary Gull proposed four condos for the 4,000-square-foot Torres Street lot, two of which would be reserved for senior citizens. Each would have its own deck.

An underground parking garage would provide space for three cars, while a parking pad at the front of the building would serve the fourth.

This building on Torres has been vacant ever since Dr. Matthew Marasco's veterinary office closed in 2000.

Commissioners liked the concept but took issue with the top level of the 3,183-square-foot building, where a rooftop deck, elevator, hallway and card room were proposed to exceed the 24-foot height limit as allowed by the code. The rules permit special features, such as towers, to be built higher if they account for less than 10 percent of the building coverage, but planner Elizabeth Caraker recommended the card room be removed, as it added bulk without "adding appreciably to the design features or ornamentation."

"Every condo in this development has a balcony or two," commented commissioner Robin Wilson. "I would be in favor of approving it if it had nothing above the roof line."

"The fact that the card room adds to the bulk of the building is true," architect Jeremy Wilson said. "But it articulates the roof, and I personally felt it was a very interesting element."

He said the property's lack of ground-level gardens inspired the rooftop deck, where residents could stroll outside, and the elevator would be a convenience. A stairway also had to be included as a fire escape.

Neighbor Donna Jett said the proposed third floor would obstruct the entire view she enjoys from her home.

"I'm very concerned about a third floor being added," another resident said. "When you walk down Torres Street, you have a beautiful view of Point Lobos, and today I walked and saw it would be obstructed. I'm also concerned about any trees that might be uprooted and lost."

Caraker said some large oaks on the property would be affected.

"Riding an elevator to get on the roof to walk around seems a bit of a luxury," commissioner Alan Hewer said.

Because the design also features "two stories of a similar footprint stacked on top of each other," according to Caraker, chairman Bill Strid suggested the second story be set back to reduce its vertical appearance.

"The design aspect I like very much," he said. "And having two units for seniors is a very, admirable idea and something you've included quite well."

The commission asked Wilson to redesign with those comments in mind, and members will again consider the application at a future meeting.

CONDOS

The city accepts the deal; Chaplan transfers the water; the water district approves; Chaplan sells the property; the buyer obtains permits and begins construction; the buyer finds a site for the apartments and convinces its owner to build; the city transfers the water to the site, and the city approves the subdivision map allowing the condos to be sold.

"If the commitment is not acceptable to the city, no subdivision is approved and the residential units constructed on the property can only be rented," the list concluded.

"There is some risk to all parties in this type of arrangement," Roseth said.

But Mandurrage said no buyer would take such a risk.

"What developer is going to plunk down $4 million and then wait to see if by step 10 he's got anything?" Mandurrage said. "It doesn't make sense."

Who would bite?

Councilman Gerard Rose called Roseth's deal cumbersome and questioned its legality. He opted for the city to accept the water and oversee its use, rather than tie it to a specific apartment project.

Councilman Erik Bethel said Chaplan's offer sounded like bribery, and accepting it could set a dangerous precedent.

Mandurrage said that, given the astronomical cost of land in Carmel, apartments are money losers.

"The margin on condos helps make apartments [in the same project] economically viable, so the extent to which these are divorced seems to be wishful thinking that someone will come along willing to do the apartments," councilman Mike Cunningham commented.

'If we don't like the law, we should change the law. We shouldn't find ways to go around it to appease one business owner. I'm very sympathetic to the persons involved, but I think we're treading on dangerous ground.'

— Erik Bethel

The Carmel Foundation is interested in expanding its low-income senior housing complex in Trevett Court on Dolores, according to president Jill Sheffield. But first, it would have to get approval from the city, be assured no environmental impact report would be required, and raise funds to build.

The only member of the public to comment, realtor Carla Ramsey, encouraged the council to make the deal work.

Mayor Sue McCloud worried a pending court case on water transfers could scuttle the deal if the projects don't come together quickly.

Bethel objected to ignoring the general plan requirement for apartments.

"If we don't like the law, we should change the law," he said. "We shouldn't find ways to go around it to appease one business owner. I'm very sympathetic to the persons involved, but I think we're treading on dangerous ground."

Although McCloud agreed, she opted to accept Chaplan's water and let the Carmel Inn be converted to condos without apartments.

"I want the record to reflect that I think very strongly that as long as I'm in this chair, I will work very hard to get the two moving forward together," she said, referring to having the apartments built independently elsewhere in the city.

After the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District approves the transfer from the property to the city, the planning commission and city council will determine how it should be allocated.

The water could be targeted for a project such as the foundation's expansion, but city administrator Rich Guillen also suggested the city could use the water to develop city-owned property.

"We fought very hard to get the right to be able to allocate the water as we see fit," Roseth explained. "The water management district manages supply; we manage where it goes."

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Carmel parent called CPD to report unwelcome advances and possible inappropriate behavior between a juvenile male and her juvenile daughter while at Carmel Beach during the late evening hours of 06-03. The daughter reported the incident to her mother on 06-04, and she in turn notified CPD. Further investigation is pending contact with the mother and daughter.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine and ambulance responded to a medical emergency at a hotel on San Antonio. Engine and rescue crews assisted ambulance crew with vitals, EKG, oxygen, patient report information and loading for a middle-aged female who was complaining of chest pain. Patient transported to CHOMP by ambulance.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Engine assisted with an alarm box at Mission and Fifth. Firefighters silenced the alarm.

Big Sur: Female Garrapatos Road resident, age 35, called to report her 16-year-old daughter had not returned home after going to school on 05-19.

Editor's note: Alert readers of last week's log may have puzzled over the item regarding a rabid fish. Upon further investigation, The Pine Cone has learned that the animal in question was a bat, not a bass. See the Friday, June 3 entry on page 14B for an important warning from deputies regarding rabies.
